One should certainly not go too far on a limb, but it seems as if the musicians of the local pop scene are currently receiving a lot more international recognition than in the past few years. This explains why local protagonists are increasingly listed in the programs of major upcoming European music festivals.

Ginga Portrait

Ever since 1995, ROSA - The Danish Rock Council has been in charge of organizing the SPOT Festival. The ambition of the SPOT Festival is to create a promotion platform for the Danish and Nordic music. The festival's repertoire is dictated chiefly by the will to support new bands and artists that are of a quality to succeed internationally. InterSPOT, the international section of SPOT Festival will also take place again, albeit pushing the concept much further: this year SPOT has initiated on-stage collaborations between international and Danish acts in the form of 40-minute sets that include 4-5 tracks from each artist's back catalogue. "By mixing foreign and Danish artists we want to create positive impact on both Danish and international tour legs of these acts and thus support the Danish & international career developments of the involved artists," explains Christian Hald Bull, international strategy manager at SPOT. Among the highlights of the InterSPOT collaborations are an unexpected get-together of Danish electrotroupe Kiss Kiss Kiss with their Austrian counterparts Ginga - who by the way met for the first time at the SPOT on Denmark event in Vienna in 2010.
